Applying for Primary Source Verification

DATAFLOW

What is Primary Source Verification (PSV)?

A highly reliable and accurate background screening process used to verify applicant credentials directly from the original issuing source.

Verified credentials may include identification documents, education degrees, previous job experiences and work licenses, among others.

Why Apply to the DataFlow Group?

Background checks aren't intended to highlight your weaknesses nor question your integrity. Instead, they are conducted to help organisations make sure you're the right person for the job.

Some entities consider credential verification as a mandatory element of the recruitment process.

At the DataFlow Group, our goal is to protect communities by ensuring the professionals serving them are qualified and competent.

The DataFlow Group verifies your education credentials, job experiences and identification documents based on requirements specified by the organisation you applied to.

How Do We Work?

You can apply online or by visiting the DataFlow Group counter located at the premises of the entity you applied to.

To start your application, click here.

Our verification process undergoes more than one quality check in order to eliminate any potential errors.

Our online support team is available at all times to answer any questions related to your application.

To contact our support team, click here.

You can either settle your payment online or by visiting the DataFlow Group counter located at the entity you applied to.

We don't rely solely on online research! We conduct site visits to directly contact the primary source and confirm the accuracy of submitted information.

It may take up to more than 30 days to receive your final report, depending on your education institution or previous workplace.

What Documents Do I Need to Provide?

You will need to provide education credentials, identification documents or previous job experiences, as specified by the regulator you're applying to.

To avoid any delays in the verification process, make sure that your documents are clear and your information is correct.

Background check requirements may vary from one regulator to another. To learn more about what documents you need to prepare based on the entity you applied to, click here.